Elaborate Floral Decorations at Two Fashionable Weddings.

J. P. MORGAN'S GIFT TO COOPER UNION

Andrew Carnegie Buys a "Golfing Box" Near Ardsley.

A HEROINE IN POVERTY

Special Correspondence of The Evening Star.

NEW YORK, June 6, 1901. The decorations for the marriage of Miss Iselin and Mr. Goodridge at noon were undoubtedly the most elaborate at any of the church weddings this spring, and compared made in the past. As the ceremony progressed a nervous lot of florists awaited outside in the churchyard ready to demolish the superb display. As the last guests left the church the men hurried in the back way and began to attack the chancel decorations. The decorations for another marriage ceremony had been awarded to a dif-

While he who had the floral contract for the noon wedding was tearing down his display the other florist, who had contracted for the 4 o'clock marriage, was waiting to put his in place. To the inexperienced eye Grace Church presented a scene of awful confusion, and if Mr. Potter, the father of the afternoon bride, could have seen the church an hour and a half before the marto expressions of indignation over the apparent hopelessness of making the church presentable for his daughter's wedding. But the perspiring florists soon began to make order out of the confusion. The schemes of the two decorators were absolutely unlike. If the noon wedding florist had been willing to extend a tradesman's courtesy toward his brother florist by leaving in a background of palms the afternoon edding florist would have been unable to accept the courtesy, owing to the great difference in the decoration plans. Just as the front doors of the church were opened at 3:30 p.m. for the second ceremony, that uniting Mr. Stillman and Miss Potter, the last of the tired florists left by the rear doors. In two hours and a half the chancel had undergone a complete change of scenery. A ton of flowers and palms had been removed and an equal amount of floral material had been carried in and put in place.

Artistic Textile Fabrics.

A collection of artistic textile fabrics that will surpass anything of the kind in this in Cooper Union within a few days. The collection is the gift of J. Pierpont Morgan. and is the result of the recent purchase in of art fabrics. He has written to the daughters of Abram S. Hewitt, directors of the museum, that the collections will be immediately shipped to New York. These collections are the Bodia collection of Barcelona, the Rivas collection of Madrid and the Baron collection of Paris. Nothing is yet known by the Misses Hewitt or the of-ficers of Cooper Union of the value of the new gift, but an idea of its importance may be gained from the fact that six pieces of one collection are now in the possession of the German government by permission of Mr. Morgan. When it was first rumored that the collections were to leave Europe the German museum officials asked permission to photograph six unique specimens, which are without known duplicates. This will make the third great collection in Cooper Union established by Mr. Morgan. Carnegie Buys a Golfing Box.

It was announced with great flourish of trumpets yesterday that Andrew Carnegie was to build a "great castellated" house on a broad demesne near Ardsley, in Westchester county. This shrank today to a "golfing box" near the St. Andrew's links and five acres of land. St. Andrew's Golf Club owns some land outside its golf course, and this land can be bought by members who will erect country houses upon it. Mr. Carnegie, who is a member of the club and In this country, bought five acres of this land touching the north side of the course and is now having erected on it a two-story cottage to cost about $12,000. This cottage will be completed probably by the 1st of October, and will be big enough to accommodate four or five people over night. A caretaker will live in it all the year round, and it will simply be a place for Mr. Carnegle to spend the night or a few days at a time, living in the simplest possible way within easy reach of the links. "It is not at all likely," said one who is familiar with Mr. Carnegie's affairs, "that he will ever form any large landed estate in this country. Mr. Carnegie always spends his summers abroad, and has just bought Skibo Castle, about which there is at present some slight legal difficulty, which probably amounts to nothing, and with his large house in New York he would have no use for a blg country place." Fat People Out for Exercise. The impressions of one who by chance or design takes to the park early these June mornings are apt to relate largely to fat persons. Such a lot of heavyweights, both men and women, are out, hard at it, exercising. At 7 a.m. the bridle paths are full or fat women riding for dear life. Their of lat women riding for dear life. Their being there might be because they scarcely care to exhibit their figures in riding habits at an hour when more people are astir, but it is more probably due to the tradition that early morning exercise is peculiarly conducive to reduction of fleshiness. There are fat men on horseback, too but each wears the same expression. too, but each wears the same expression of determination to ride or die in the effort to "reduce." The pedestrian paths fairly swarm with stout old men that puff along as though each wheeze would puff along as though each wheeze would be their last. The chins of most of these worthles snuggle deep in their sweaters; they are doing their flesh reducing stunts thoroughly and scientifically. That such a number of fat people should be seeking to reduce their avoirdupois is less of a mys-tery than where they all come from. Be-tween 6 and 7 o'clock these June mornings in Central Park may be known as the first in Central Park may be known as the "Fat Persons' Hour." They own the place.

A Heroine in Poverty. In the shabby attic of a little frame house over in Brooklyn lives a decrepit old flar collections in Europe will be installed and bent with age, and dependent for her sustenance on the charity of friends, who have scarcely enough for themselves. This is "Mother" Ferguson, who served as a field nurse throughout the civil war, was in over 100 battles, and was complimented and honored by great generals and even by Lincoln himself for her brave work in the field. Always she wears on her faded shawl a Grand Army button and a small tin type of Lincoln, with a rosette of the national colors. She looks feeble and lifeless enough while sitting quietly in her chair, but as soon as she gets warmed into talking of the battle she has been through, the bloodshed she witnessed and the generals she knew, age and the rheumatism, from which she suffers severely, are forgot, while her eyes flash and she becomes all while her eyes hash and she becomes all animation. Phil Sheridan was her favorite general, and she never tires of telling of his daring exploits. For the past three years "Mother" Ferguson has been unable to work. Bourke Cockran tried to get her a pension while he was in Congress, but was unsuccessful.

life in English country houses, but one New Yorker who has just returned from England thinks that he has had an experience that marks the limit to which pre-tentious luxury in living may go. He was stopping at the home of an American girl of wealth who married an Englishman of title, and lives now in England in all the circumstances that his position and her wealth make possible. The dinner was, of course, served by as many men as there were guests at the table, and was as pom-pous and elaborate as was to be expected. It was the next morning, however, that the most peculiar feature of the household methods came to his knowledge. He was awakened by the valet at the hour he had named, and was surprised to see him a moment later, before he was fully awake, holding at the side of his bed a silver bowl filled with water. The New Yorker started in amazement at the man and the bowl, without the faintest idea what his duty in the matter was. The valet looked at him compassionately a moment before he came to his assistance. Then he said, with a suggestion of pity for the ignorance of a poor American:
"It's to test the temperature of your bath, sir."

It was a relief to the guest to realize that he was not expected to do more than put his finger into the water and say that it was all right.

Big Athletic Event. There is not a first-class athlete of the country who will not be at Travers Island next Saturday, for the New York Athletic Club will hold its sixty-sixth set of games there, and the games promise the usual success, for in all of the many events the best men of colleges and clubs are entered. Records ought to go, too, for the track at the country home of the club is very fast. In addition to the regular set of field and track events, the club has arranged two special features. They are relay races. The first will be open to club and college eams of four men each, and the second ar invitation interscholastic race, open to eams of five. Reichstag Wants Pay.

From the London Chronicle. Although the German reichstag, by a vot of 185 to 40, has pronounced in favor of the payment of its members, there is not the slightest chance of this being assented to by the federal council representing the federal sovereigns, which may be called the imperial government, and there are always two to the making of a law, as well as of a bargain, in Germany. The reichstag has passed resolutions of the same kind before this, but they came to nothing. Members of the Prussian lower house enjoy a stipend of about 15s. a day—in addition to their traveling expenses—during the session; but rather than include such a principle in the German constitution, when it was being decided in 1871 Big. drafted in 1866, and redrafted in 1871, Bismarck threatened to wreck it altogether. He looked upon the non-payment of men bers, he said, as a sound corrective and counterpoise to the dangers of universal suffrage which had been granted to the German people, and with this safety an-chor he vowed he would on no account

FOR PURCHASE OF HOME,

District W. C. T. U. Convention Raises Additional Funds. The progress made in raising funds for the purchase of the building on 6th street near F street recently, to be used by the District Woman's Christian Temperance Union as headquarters, was made at the District quarterly meeting, which was held yesterday. Subscriptions amounting to $800) were made toward the next payment, which will be due in July.

The organization met yesterday in Wesley Chapel, corner of 5th and F streets, the president, Mrs. Clinton Smith, in the chair. In the absence of Mrs. Isaac Clarke, who was to have conducted the devotional exercises of the morning, the Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Snell of Anacostia, and prayer offered by Mrs. Buzzee, president of Georgetown Union. The report of Mrs. DeRiemer, corresponding secretary, followed, and the minutes of the executive committee were read by Mrs. Clayton Emig, assistant secretary. Rev. Mr. Heisse pastor of Wesley Church, was invited to the platform and made a short address, welcoming the W. C. T. U. to his church. Mrs. S. H. Martin responded. The treas-urer's report was read by Miss Gussie Nichols, which showed the quarter's receipts from dues, etc., to have been something over $180.

Mrs. Mary E. Brown, treasurer of board of trustees, repored the total of monies received for the permanent headquarters of the District Union, No. 522, 6th street northwest, to be $3,208.79. The sum of $2,000 was paid down at the time of purchase, and the property has been insured for five years. Mrs. J. H. Robinson, president of board of trustees, made an earnest appeal to the women of the convention to work earnestly and constantly to secure funds to make the second payment of $3,000 in July. She was followed by Mrs. Emma Shelton, financial secretary, who called for pledges toward this object, stating that she had received piedges of $175, conditional upon the raising of the whole $3,000. The unions and individuals responded by guaranteeing the sum of $785, of which $200 was at once placed in the treasurer's hands, the remainder to be paid by

Mrs. Hartsock led in prayer, and "Praise God, from Whom All Blessings Flow," etc.,

was sung.

Mrs. Merrick said that as the former treasurer, Mrs. T. A. Williams, who had served them so long and acceptably, had offered her resignation, which must be considered as final, she wished to nominate for that office one known to all present, whose capability was undoubted—Mrs. H. A. Gillenwater. The nomination was received with prolonged applause, and she was unanimously elected, and was presented to the convention by the president. Mrs. Gillenwater responded briefly to the compliment paid her and at once assumed the duties of her office. The convention then adjourned until 2 o'clock p.m.

The devotional exercises of the afternoon were conducted by Mrs. Hutchins, president of Frances Willard Union, after which Mrs. C. B. Bailey sang a sweet solo, "He Leadeth Me." Mrs. Hartsock, the vice president, took the chair to conduct a memorial service in memory of the late Hiconsidered as final, she wished to nominate morial service in memory of the late Hi-ram Price. Dr. Brooks, chaplain of Anti-Saloon League, read a brief eulogy of the life and character of the departed. Mrs.

Gillenwater and others spoke of Mr. Price's unfailing interest in the work of the W. C. A paper was read on the life and work of the late Mrs. H. N. K. Goff, who was for some years before the public as a high official in the order of Good Templars and a lecturer on reform lines in this country and in Europe.

manifested throughout the meeting for President and Mrs. McKinley. Mrs. Sprague, superintendent of work among colored people, reported the work done. Miss Mabel Callahan read the report of the "Y" branch. Mrs. Hartsock suggested that an excursion be planned for the District Union in the near future, mentioning Chautauqua Beach as the most suitable place. This met with approval, and plans will be made to this end. The convention deplored the fact that Christian people should so often patronize places where liquor is sold, and urges that individuals, societies and churches give their patronage to Chataugua Beach, which is conducted on purely Christian principles, and where there are so many attractions without temptations to evil. The convention adjourned at 4:30 o'clock.

From the London Telegraph.

If it should come to be that a British king again summons his Scotish subjects to meet him within its walls the invita-tion will have a certain poetic fitness, for within the palace was celebrated the union of the thistle and the rose—the marriage of James IV of Scotland to Margaret Tudor, which, after a hundred more years of strife, brought the union of the crowns. The palace has in its time seen evil days. In 1044 and 1547 English armies burned it.

HOLYROOD PALACE. Rumors of a Revival of Entertain-

Many a Scottish heart has been stirred by the mere rumor that once again scenes of royal pageantry and kingly entertainment may be enacted within the walls of Holyrood Palace. The very name is eloquent of bygone days. Picturesque memories cluster around the old gray walls, which have seen so many deeds of derringdo and high emprise. With them is bound up indissolubly the sad story of the Stuarts, some of whom were born, married, died and were buried within the palace. Parliaments and councils charged with the fate of the nation deliberated in its rooms. Edward Balliol there made submission to Edward III of England. There the Scottish kings made their home for centuries, and there, above all, linger cherished traditions, however indefensible in historic udgment, of the beautiful and unhappy Mary Queen of Scots and of Bonnie Prince Charlie. To this day Queen Mary's au-dience chamber, her tiny bed room and still tinier supping room, where her favorite Rizzio was struck down under her eyes, are among the most venerated of the historic shrines of Scotland.

In 1044 and 1547 English armies burned it, and though it was restored it again fell victim to a fire, which broke out while Cromwell's soldiers were in possession. Again it rose. James I of England was crowned in it as King James VI of the Scots. Charles I was crowned there, too, and James VII, as Duke of Albany, held court within the palace. In it, too, Bonnie Prince Charlie, in the brief heyday of his fortunes, held kingly state, before he sought the stricken fields of England. But these days belong rather to the field of history and romance. The foreshadowing of royal state being resumed at Holyrood makes doubly interesting the last great visit of state, which was paid to it in 1822 by King George IV. True, her late ma-jesty Queen Victoria visited Holyrood on many occasions, especially while her con-sort was still spared to her. She then made it a halting place for a few days on her way to and from Balmoral; but the palace was a residence rather than a court. State functions were few and limited for the most part to the romantic customs of the presentation to her majesty of the keys of the city by the lord provost and magistrates, and of three barbed arrows by the company of archers, the royal rows by the company of archers, the royal bodyguard in Scotland, a ceremony dating from 1676. The queen stayed in Holyrood on the occasion of the great review of Scottish volunteers in 1881, and again—the last time royalty slept within the walls-in 1896, when her majesty opened Edin-burgh international exhibition. Year by year the palace is the seat for a fortnight in May of the royal representative, the lord high commissioner to the general as-sembly of the Church of Scotland, who there gives a series of dinners to the Scot-tish clergy and other dignitaries; but these functions, though nominally royal in their character, are far removed from the splendor and gayety usually associated with court scenes.
